

Dr. Debbie Hill

Dr. Debbie Hill is a 2010 graduate of the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine. Originally from Lee County, Virginia, she spent the past eleven years as a small animal vet in a busy 24/7 clinic in Loudoun County. Dr. Hill was drawn to the small-town family feel of Marshall Veterinary Clinic and looks forward to getting to know you and your pets for years to come.

Like all veterinarians, Dr. Hill's love for animals led her to veterinary school. She cannot imagine going through life without dogs. The practice of veterinary medicine, though, is about more than loving and helping animals. For her, it is about preserving the bond between pets and their people for as long as possible. She enjoys her daily interactions with pets and their owners, including children who bring along their stuffed animals for check-ups, too.

Dr. Hill's professional interests include routine wellness care, internal medicine, and pain management. As a certified veterinary medical acupuncturist, she uses acupuncture alongside Western medications to improve the comfort of her patients. It is particularly satisfying to extend the quality of life for many of our arthritic senior pets.

When she is not at work, Dr. Hill can be found at home with her dogs, hiking, or volunteering.
